Protestas por Palestina ocorren durante ceremonias de graduación en diversas universidades de Estados Unidos

El sábado, pequeñas protestas pro-Palestina emergieron esporádicamente durante las ceremonias de graduación en colegios y universidades de Carolina del Norte a California, incluyendo decenas de estudiantes que se retiraron durante el discurso de apertura del gobernador republicano Glenn Youngkin en la Universidad de Virginia Occidental.

Algunos de los aproximadamente 100 estudiantes y miembros de la familia que se retiraron durante el discurso de Youngkin mostraron su apoyo a Palestina, mientras que otros sostuvieron señales de oposición a sus políticas educativas, según WRIC-TV.

En la Universidad de Wisconsin-Madison, un pequeño grupo de manifestantes escenificó una protesta silenciosa aparentemente durante la ceremonia en el Camp Randall Stadium. Una {img} publicada por el Wisconsin State Journal mostró a unas seis personas caminando por la parte posterior del estadio, con dos sosteniendo una bandera palestina.

Marc Lovicott, vocero de la policía del campus, dijo que el grupo, al que creía que eran estudiantes porque llevaban birretes y togas, "fue guiado suavemente pero se retiraron por su propia voluntad". No se realizaron arrestos.

La manifestación se produjo después de que los manifestantes pro-Palestina en el campus acordaran el viernes dismantelar permanentemente su acampe de dos semanas y no interrumpir las ceremonias de graduación a cambio de tener la oportunidad de conectarse con "tomadores de decisiones" que controlan las inversiones universitarias para el 1 de julio. La universidad acordó aumentar el apoyo a becarios y estudiantes afectados por las guerras en Gaza y Ucrania.

En la Universidad de Carolina del Norte, Chapel Hill, manifestantes pro-Palestina salpicaron de pintura roja las escaleras de un edificio horas antes de la ceremonia de graduación de la escuela y corearon consignas en el campus, mientras que los estudiantes que vestían togas de color azul claro se tomaban {img}s, informó el News & Observer. En la Universidad de Texas, Austin, un estudiante levantó una bandera palestina durante una ceremonia de graduación y se negó a abandonar el escenario brevemente antes de ser escoltado por la seguridad.

Y en la Universidad de California, Berkeley, un pequeño grupo de manifestantes pro-Palestina comenzó a ondear banderas y a corear consignas durante la ceremonia de graduación y fueron escoltados al final del estadio, donde se unieron a otros, según el San Francisco Chronicle. No se produjeron contramanifestaciones importantes, pero algunos asistentes mostraron su frustración. "Siento que están arruinando todo esto para aquellos de nosotros que pagamos entradas y vinimos a mostrar nuestro orgullo por nuestros graduados", dijo Annie Ramos, cuya hija es estudiante. "Hay un momento y un lugar, y esto no es el adecuado".

Los eventos del sábado fueron menos dramáticos de lo que ocurrió en otros campus el viernes, cuando la policía realizó decenas de arrestos mientras dismantelaba campamentos de protesta pro-Palestina en la Universidad de Pensilvania y el Instituto de Tecnología de Massachusetts. Estas acciones se produjeron horas después de que la policía lanzara gases lacrimógenos a los manifestantes y desmantelara un campamento similar en la Universidad de Arizona.

La Asociación de Prensa ha registrado al menos 75 instancias desde el 18 de abril en las que se realizaron arrestos en protestas en campus de Estados Unidos. Cerca de 2.900 personas han sido arrestadas en 57 colegios y universidades. Los números se basan en informes de la AP, declaraciones de las escuelas y las fuerzas del orden.

En la Universidad de Virginia Occidental, Youngkin, quien también recibió un doctorado honorario en letras humanitarias en la ceremonia de graduación, no pareció dirigirse a los estudiantes que abandonaron el evento.

"El mundo necesita su música", dijo Youngkin durante su discurso. "Todos ustedes serán la sinfonía.

- Hagan una obra maestra".
